ABSTRACT

A bibliography of books, articles, texts, teaching guides, research reports, and other materials on intercultural communication contains mostly primary source materials of interest to Japanese teachers of English, and is in two parts. The items in the first part are divided into fourteen categories: general, theory, nonverbal communication, area studies, cross cultural studies, interpersonal communication, multicultural education, cross cultural training, intercultural research, international communication, bilingual education, culture in language teaching, teaching culture, and teaching English as a second language. The second part includes two additional categories, mass communication and other communications. (MSE)

Intercultural Communication Bibliography

Kenji Kitao

This bibliography on intercultural communication was compiled for Japanese teachers of English who are interested in this field and would like to study to improve their teaching of English to Japanese students. All items are selected from this point of view. However, it is also designed for other people who are interested in this field to broaden their knowledge.

In order to make the use of this bibliography easier, I classified the materials into the subcategories shown in the directory. Materials in each subcategory are in alphabetical order by author.

This bibliography follows the style of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (3rd ed.). However, if the information is available, authors' or editors' first names are included for the convenience of those who need to use the MLA style sheet.

Most of the items listed in the bibliography are from primary sources. However, I included some very useful items that I know of, even if I do not have access to them at this time. Those were taken from other bibliographies, and the first names of authors or editors may not be spelled out.

Since there are many Americans who would like to go to Japan to teach English, I included some items on teaching English in Japan.

For the convenience of those with access to the Michigan State University library, I included the library call number at the end of each item, if it is available at the library. If it is not available there, I put NA.

I made a list of journals and books frequently referred to in this bibliography. It is shown on pages 3-5.

Intercultural Communication
Bibliography (Part 2)

Kenji Kitao

This bibliography on intercultural communication is the second part of a bibliography which was compiled for Japanese teachers of English who are interested in this field and would like to study to improve their teaching of English to Japanese students. All items are selected from this point of view. However, it is also designed for other people who are interested in this field for the purpose of broadening their knowledge.

In order to make the use of this bibliography easier, I classified the materials into the subcategories shown in the directory. The second half includes two new categories, mass media and other communications. Materials in each subcategory are in alphabetical order by author.

This bibliography follows the style of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (3rd ed.). However, if the information is available, authors' or editors' first names are included for the convenience of those who need to use the MLA style sheet.

Most of the items listed in the bibliography are from primary sources. However, I included some very useful items that I know of, even if I do not have access to them at this time. Those were taken from other bibliographies, and the first names of authors or editors may not be spelled out.

For the convenience of those with access to the Michigan State University library, I included the library call number at the end of each item, if it is available at the library. If it is not available there, I put NA.

I made a list of journals and books frequently referred to in this bibliography. It is shown on pages 3-5.
